

Messiah versus Christ.

It is necessary to clarify this point because there is much confusion in the Human Being about what a Christ is and what a Messiah is. And this confusion is blatantly intentional.

Many cultures that persist to this day have the myth that they were founded by the Gods of the Sun. And here the two concepts are already mixed. The culture that most clearly reflects this myth is the Toltec, of which hardly anything remains, but its myths are reflected in its ruins.

The myth of the Feathered Serpent, of the Toltec culture, establishes the fact that the gods become men, inhabit among us, and sacrifice themselves to provide 1000 or 2000 more years of life to humanity, until the next Feathered Serpent emerges. That is, the Feathered Serpent revitalizes humanity giving it hope to continue, with a frequency of approximately every 1000 or 2000 years.

What is happening, since the Neolithic and getting lost in the Paleolithic, is that with this frequency a Christ arises, that is, a man who tries to change the world, who tries to get Humanity out of its horrible crime of refuse to live with everything involved in it, with all the horror that Humanity takes on. This man is lynched. Humanity turns all its anger on him. Now, the meaning of him is changed, and he becomes a Messiah.

And what is a Messiah? A Messiah is a great military political leader who achieves total victory for his people. Take a big change! The Christ does not fight, he preaches peace, collaboration and respect, and he is attributed, after lynching him, the ability to feed the struggle of his people, when he had no people, but spoke to all The humanity.

Here we have the origin of the myth of the Gods of the Sun, deeply rooted and with many variations, which fuels the human struggle. See, for example, the myth of Atlantis, which was recounted for millennia in vast areas around Ancient Egypt. It evolved as an oral legend, each narrator introduced his or her impromptu, until it reached the ears of Platon, a great criminal against humanity, he liked it and wrote it.

And what do the myths of Atlantis and others say? Well, there was a civilization of giants, very technologically advanced, who dominated the world, and from which derive the calls to the Final Victory. This is what the Nazis understood, and Hitler was their Messiah, but they weren't the only ones. The Jews also wait for their Messiah to give them the Final Victory. Each and every one of the excluding human groups awaits their Messiah and his Victory.

In every opportunity that Humanity has to get out of its criminality, there is a trap set by Humanity, and the Christs fall into this trap. They try to change the world and become defenders of the fight, feeding human criminality for 1000 or 2000 years.

Yes, okay, the Messiahs provide victory for 1000 years (millennialism), if they win, but what does he or she win at the End of the World?

The prize for the winner is death. In the pyramid of the Feathered Serpent, in Teotihuacan, Mexico, the tomb of God is represented. Through a tunnel that starts from the front, you access a narrow and roughly excavated chamber under the center of the pyramid. There is no comfort, just where to sit. Here God would enter once the whole planet died, and he or she would die little by little of hunger in total darkness, a frightening agony, while he or she would realize what has happened in Humanity, without the possibility of correction. How awful.

However, at the End of the World in which we find ourselves, not one more Christ appears who also falls into the trap, but the Antichrist appears, something very different, because the Antichrist, who is me, discovers the entire human cake, from the fact that no one believes himself or herself immortal until the Pact with Death, so he does not fall into any of the traps set by Humanity. In this way, the Antichrist will not become Messiah, and he will not win any fight. As for the emergence of a Messiah directly, well, there are a few opting for the Throne, we all know who they are. Remember, Corpse worshiped by corpses. This is what Nostradamus calls “the third Antichrist”, committing an error. You cannot choose this latter.

But why, in the first and last instance, are the Christs confused with Messiahs? Well, very simple. No one ever follows a Christ. Yes, his goodness, his desire and his intention to live attract attention and many are interested, but each and every one of those interested is always waiting for the Christ to give the starting signal for the fight that the Messiah must lead for the Total Victory. If the Christ is Christ and not the Messiah, he defrauds his and her followers and they turn against him, lynching him. Once Christ is lynched, they change its meaning and worship him as the Messiah who, despite being dead, will achieve Total Victory, that is, they bet on him as God. He is a god who will be God, the winner.

Today we have a very well studied Messiah, he is Hitler, the Messiah of the Nazis. There are tons of documentaries about him, his life is known in detail, from his birth to his failure in his frustrated attempt to... to destroy the Planet, to commit suicide on the Planet? Well, well, things are not so clear. The resounding truth is that from the moment he began the fight he wanted to lose.

Hitler was suicidal, hence his enormous and brazen alleged mistakes, such as declaring war on the United States, a huge country, the most industrialized in the world by far, and whose industry he could not bomb. Can anyone doubt that this was his most determined and intentional step toward his own defeat?

Let's see, let's see. I had been angry about this issue for a long time, seeing that there is something wrong here, something very very significant, since I was a teenager, when I first heard about the phenomenon. Keep in mind that in the modern world we are educated so that we cannot learn. I was told about World War II, but I was not given a single piece of information about the Nazi genocide or its meaning. And it was very recently when, after a lifetime of suspicions, in one of many documentaries, they said that Hitler, at the beginning of his fight, thought that he was not suitable for the task that was presented to him, and that his task was to prepare the way for another who would come later, just as Saint John the Baptist prepared the way for Jesus Christ.

The funny thing is that I had the same thought when I started my path to change the world. I understand, therefore, the phenomenon. And Jesus Christ had the same doubt. What happens is that when the path presents itself, one is not prepared.

The phenomena of Christ and the Messiah are, in their beginning, the same phenomenon. That is why the Christs have followers, at the beginning, but they are the followers of the Messiah, a Christ is not followed by God. I have seen it very clearly on my path. My few followers have given up as they discovered, beyond a doubt, that I am not a Messiah and, after fooling around with Knowledge, they have returned to the flock of cowards.

Now, you might think that if someone tasked with changing the world wants followers, it has to be Messiah and not Christ, but that is not the point. It is true that the Christs become known because they are confused with the Messiah, otherwise the Christ phenomenon would not exist, because no one would listen to them at the very beginning of their path and they would not become known. However, the differentiation between Christ and Messiah is another.

The thing is that the beginning of the path, both of a Christ and of a Messiah, is the Path of Knowledge, the understanding of Humanity. Now, he who has made the Pact with Death and is rejecting Existence out of cowardice encounters the Basic Terror that approaching such knowledge produces, and this makes him rebound and run towards the End of the World. This is the case of Hitler and many other Messiahs. It is the race towards God.

On the other hand, the Christ has not made the Pact with Death, he does not reject Existence, and the Basic Terror does not occur. The path is clear, just find it. And to find this you have to be at the End of the World, with all the information, that is, you have to be, not a Christ, but the Antichrist, who is the one who manages to completely unravel the human mess.

Just one more thing: Nobody believes themselves to be immortal. Consequently, the intent of the Christs is alive in all Human Beings. The authentic one, not the changed one.
